State should ave road victims from lawyers'

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Government, or some other agency, should offer medical insurance to road accident victims rather than leave them "to the mercies of insurance companies and lawyers," says Dr. Yisrael Katz, chairman of the National Insurance Institute.

Only 40 per cent of persons injured in 1966 claimed medical or rehabilitation expenses; half of these remuneration after two years,
the rest waited longer — or still waiting, he told a Mo'etzet
meeting in Tel Aviv Monday. The reason he was presenting 1966 figures, Dr. Katz said, was that the use of lengthy litigation no update figures had been compiled.

Dr. Katz said 21,000 persons were injured in road accidents
last year — 15 per cent of them died and 6 per cent old people.
Of those receiving compensation
from private insurers, 90 per cent
settled compromise settlements in court proceedings ended. He said claimants would accept smaller amounts if these were paid promptly.
Dr. Katz added that National Insurance paid its clients higher medical and rehabilitation expenses
than commercial companies.

310,000 signed anti-ransom plea

More than 310,000 people signed nationwide protest against the let ransom tax, the Council of Men's Organizations reported yesterday. The original petitions sent last week to Israel's U.N.
ambassador, Yosef Tekeah, for transmission to the U.N. Secretary-General, Kurt Waldheim. The drive was organized last month by the M.O.

The second sarcophagus found in Ashkelon on Monday. Although the corner in the foreground is damaged, the faces on the figures are intact — in contrast to the earlier-found coffin, on which all the heads were defaced (apparently by grave robbers). (Louisa photo)

Second Roman sarcophagus found near Ashkelon beach

ASHKELON. — A second Roman sarcophagus was unearthed here Monday afternoon, on the same excavation site where another beautifully preserved marble coffin and cover were discovered last week.
The Inspector of Antiquities for Ashkelon did the excavation.
The sarcophagus, found during digging of foundations for a villa in the Bama quarter, near the beach here, was transferred to the Ashdod community centre
the same night. But word of the find quickly spread in Ashkelon and a large crowd streamed to see it

at its resting place beside last week's find.
Archaeologists described Monday's find as even finer than last week's,
despite the fact that this time no lid was found. A beautifully carved frize of men, armed and unarmed,
runs around three of its four sides,
and at least eight horses are clearly visible. It depicts a battle between Roman soldiers and barbarians, seen under the horses'
hooves.

Experts from the Antiquities Department are due to begin restoration work on the two stone coffins in the next few weeks. Meanwhile, sentiment is growing in Ashkelon to have the Municipality and the Antiquities Department halt all building on the site until a thorough check has been made. Both of the 2nd- or 3rd century coffins were discovered by the contractor building
the villa. (Itim)

Jackson: Russians haven't left M.-E. — only shifted emphasis

By CHARLES WEISS
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — Senator Henry Jackson thinks the Russians have not left the Middle East but have merely shifted their tactics and placed their emphasis on the Persian Gulf. The Senator was speaking at a Foreign Press Association luncheon yesterday at the Park Hotel.
A ranking member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and, for a time, a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Jackson said the Gulf has fully half of the world's proven oil reserves. Today, he said, it provides Europe with 80 per cent of its oil and Japan with 90 per cent. By 1980, the U.S. will get half of its petroleum from there.

"Despite the departure of Soviet forces from Egypt, it would, in my view, be misleading indeed to assume that it is an indication of their desire to depart from the Middle East. In my judgement, nothing could be farther from the truth. Their movements in Iraq and Syria clearly point to future mischief in the Persian Gulf, an area of great strategic importance both to them and to the Western world," he said.
He called Soviet machinations in Iraq "a pincer movement against the Shah of Iran."

The Senator from the state of Washington is in Israel for a two-day visit as guest of the Foreign Ministry. From Israel, he goes on today to Iran and then to Saudi Arabia, two of the major oil suppliers in the region, and then to Bonn and Eastern Europe.
Sen. Jackson said his interest in,
and support for, Israel stems from a memory he would like to forget:
"I was in Buchenwald two days after liberation."
He came out strongly for the right of Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel. He believes the amendment which he fathered in the Senate — and which had 75 other co-sponsor — got the Soviets, in a number of cases, to waive the ransom tax on Jews going to Israel. The amendment, he said, would bar credits,

"most-favoured-nation" status and investment guarantees from countries which put insurmountable barriers in the way of emigration. He hoped the House would also adopt it.

In answer to a question, he described the next few months as "a dangerous time for Israel." He stressed that he had no evidence that the Nixon administration would bring political pressure on Israel;
but, he added, as long as talks on a rapprochement are going on with Moscow, the Middle East has to be one of the topics discussed.
There is always the danger, he went on, that something might come out of the talks which would impinge on the security of Israel. The

C'ttee on poor youth to submit findings soon

The Government-appointed Committee on the Plight of Underprivileged Youth has almost completed its work, Prime Minister Golda Meir told the Cabinet this week.
Mrs. Meir formed the committee in mid-1971, following the emergence of the Israeli Black Panthers and the swing in public attention toward the plight of the poor.
Ten work teams, which covered social, educational, health and labour problems among underprivileged youth, will each submit a report to the Cabinet. Mrs. Meir will take part in formulating recommendations to be passed to pertinent ministries and agencies. The committee is chaired by Dr. Yisrael Katz, head of the National Insurance Institute.
A special army team is presenting its own conclusions on how the I.D.F. can assist needy youngsters.
One result already achieved by the Committee's work has been the increase in National Insurance allowances for children, an Institute spokesman said.
The reports will be made public after they are distributed to Government agencies, Mrs. Meir's office reported.

Farmers demand more for milk

Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Moshav Movement Secretariat is demanding that dairy farmers get higher prices for milk.
Mr. Aharon Uzan, Secretary of the Moshav Movement, pointed out that dairy farming is a source of income for the moshav and that if the prices for milk are not raised many farmers may have to sell their dairy herds. If this should happen he warned, it will decrease the supply of milk — which is already having trouble meeting demand.
They are exerting pressure now
as negotiations are currently going on to determine the cost of milk and milk products, which is expected to rise on April 1.

Druse village split over woman in 'political post'

By YOEL DAB
Jerusalem Post Reporter
SFIYA. — The population of his large Druse village on Mount Zarnel has been split by the actions of one of its inhabitants, a young woman teacher, who has set up a Mappam club for young women.
The teacher, Dumya Zaher,
says that she is not a member of Mappam and does not even like politics. "All I want is to provide useful spare-time pursuits for Druse girls, especially in the afternoon. What's wrong with that?"
But the villagers find plenty wrong with it. They especially object to the fact that a woman has been given what looks like a political post. "Will a woman now tell us who to vote for?"
one old man wanted to know.
This is not the first time Miss Zaher has stirred up controversy in her village. When she was sent to high school in Nazareth, the

L50m. psychiatric hospital to be built at Tirat Carmel

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter
IFA. — A 400-bed, L50m. psychiatric hospital is to be built at Carmel for the Ministry of Interior.
Mol Boneh signed the contract with the Ministry last week. Construction work will start soon and take nearly four years to complete.
A nurses' school now under construction will be completed soon and Ministry hopes to have some 60 incent nurses ready to staff the hospital when it opens.
The project was held up for a time because of Local Council ap-petitions that the town's "image" would be hurt when it became the site of a mental hospital.
The hospital will help ease the present grave shortage of hospital beds for mental patients. According to the Health Ministry spokesman,
total number of beds in public and private institutions was 7,543

Tractor hits mine near Gaza Strip

ASHKELON. — A civilian tractor struck a mine near the Gaza Strip on Monday. There were no casualties.
The front wheels of the vehicle were damaged in the blast, which occurred at the side of the road to

of the Strip. Security forces launched an investigation to determine

Avizohar asks Knesset debate on areas

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
Defence Minister Moshe Dayan's
call last week for the Knesset to play a bigger role in the affairs of the administered areas has so far found an echo only in independent
M.K. Meir Avizohar.
Mr. Avizohar has tabled a request for a debate on Government policies and operations in the areas.
He explained in a letter to Speaker Yisrael Yeshayahu that the House has not discussed the areas in the past, despite the facts that security secrets are not involved and that the areas are widely debated in party and public forums.
(Labour Party bodies are currently engaged in a top-level debate on the future of the areas.)
Mr. Avizohar resigned last year from the State List faction, formerly associated with Mr. Dayan's extra-parliamentary Labour.

Judea and Samaria on the occasion of the Muslim holiday Id el-Fitr.

Missing immigrant found dead in Haifa

Jerusalem Post Reporter
HAIFA. — The body of a new immigrant dental technician missing for two weeks was discovered on Monday in a wadi at Neve Sha'anun here.
The body of Kalman Fishel, 57,
who came here with his wife last month from Sweden, was found by neighbourhood children who first spotted an abandoned scooter in the wadi. Police found a letter left by the deceased. He and his wife lived in the Professionals' Hostel in Nazareth.
On October 29 he visited his brother, Haim Fishel, at Neve Sha-
'anun. He disappeared the next day after saying he was going to Tel Aviv to register in the Dental Technicians Association. The body was taken to the Institute of Forensic Medicine.
The deceased had been under psychiatric care, it was learned.

Elsie Sacks dies, aged 77

Dr. Muriel Elsie (Landau) Sacks
of London died suddenly in Herzliya
on Monday night, at the age of 77, while visiting this country as a member of the Joint Palestine Appeal mission from Britain.
A distinguished surgeon, Dr. Sacks was the first Jewish woman to become a member of the Royal College of Surgeons. She was a member of the staff of three leading hospitals and took a leading part in the Doctors' Division of the J.P.A.
She was a member of a large and well-known family (her sister, the late Annie Landau, was headmistress of the Evelyn de Rothschild school in Jerusalem). Her husband, Dr. Samuel Sacks, is an uncle of Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

When you fly BEA we can't guarantee that you'll meet your captain. In fact the chances are that you won't. Not because the captain is uninterested in his passengers. On the contrary, the well-being of his passengers is the captain's prime concern. And the best contribution he believes that he can make to that well-being is to stay in the cockpit, giving his full personal attention to every last detail of the flight. But just occasionally (though not here nor as often as he would like),
the captain may hand over to his first some of his passengers personally. That gives him a lot of pleasure. To judge from

of pleasure too.

Black Hebrews sent back home

LOD AIRPORT. — Four Black Hebrews from the U.S., denied entry into Israel when they arrived on Monday, were flown back out of the country yesterday, after spending the night in the passenger terminal. They left quietly, despite their earlier declaration that they would have to be removed by force.
The four — James Brown, William Bamberg, John Davis and a fourth who did not give his name — had been denied entry on the grounds that they had not applied for immigration before arriving. Muttering
"this is terrible," one of the men
said they would now have to rethink their attitude towards "your country."

Meanwhile, the High Court of Justice yesterday heard the bid of eight other members of the sect
to be allowed to stay in the country. The eight, who were ordered to leave when their tourist visas ran out a year ago, want the Court to order the Interior Minister to cancel the expulsion orders.

Attorney Yosef Ben-Menashe said
his clients believed they were the Chosen People and that their original Hebrew ancestors had gone to western Liberia before being taken as slaves to Jamaica and then to the U.S. It was for this reason they themselves had come first to Liberia (which expelled them),
before coming to Israel, he said.

Assistant State Attorney Yoram
Barnea told the court that the sect
members could not be considered Jews, as they were not Jewish by halacha, did not pray in Hebrew,
and did not see the value of converting to Judaism. He described the sect as a liberation movement
with religious overtones.
The court will give its decision
at a later date.

Peron lands in Italy on way back home

ROME. — Former Argentina President Juan Peron arrived here from Madrid yesterday on the first leg of a planned return to his homeland after 17 years in exile.

Looking bronzed and fit, the 77-year-old ex-President was immediately greeted by about 60 supporters as he descended the steps of the Mystere executive jet which had flown him to Rome's Ciampino military airport.

According to one journalist, Peron said his return to Argentina was an attempt to calm spirits at an extremely difficult moment for the country.

Despite reports that Peron hoped to see Pope Paul during his brief stay in Rome, a member of his entourage said that such a meeting was unlikely.

But informed sources did not exclude the possibility of some contact between the Vatican and Peron, who was excommunicated by Pope Pius XII in 1955 after he had conducted a campaign in Argentina against the Roman Catholic church.

Peron, who has lived for the past 12 years in Madrid after being ousted from power in Argentina in 1955, was wearing a dark grey suit and carried a camelhair overcoat over his arm. Beside him was his wife, Isabel Martinez.

Although Peron's two-day visit to Italy has been described as strictly private, the former Argentinian leader met with Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti yesterday afternoon.

In Buenos Aires, a group of Peronist unions yesterday proposed a 16-hour general strike on Friday to mark Peron's homecoming. The unions represent about 90 per cent of the nation's labour union. A strike would free thousands of Peronist workers to meet Peron, who is due to arrive here on Friday morning. (Reuter, AP)

Egypt may take 'measures' against B.B.C.

CAIRO (Reuter). — Egypt is considering measures against the British Broadcasting Corporation (B.B.C.) for its "anti-Arab campaign," the Middle East news agency reported on Monday.

The agency said the B.B.C. was carrying out a hostile plan "serving Arab enemies" and said the counter-action might be an Egyptian and Arab one, but did not specify what measures might be taken.

On Monday night Egypt's Deputy Premier and Minister of Culture and Information, Dr. Mohammed Abdel Kader Hatem, summoned the British ambassador, Sir Richard Beaumont, to make similar charges against the B.B.C.

The agency said the B.B.C. in disseminating ill-intentioned rumors, attempted to undermine Egyptian-Libyan relations, distort Egyptian-Soviet relations and shake Egypt's home front.

In London, a B.B.C. spokesman said he had no comment on the charges.

Lansky trial set for January

MIAMI (AP). — A judge on Monday ordered Meyer Lansky to stand trial in Miami on January 19 next year on criminal contempt of court charges.

U.S. District Court Judge James L. King set the date for trial on the charge returned by a grand jury after Lansky failed to appear in Miami in response to a subpoena delivered to him in Israel in June 1971.

Lansky has also been indicted on income tax charges, but court sources said he would be tried on those counts later.

Lansky entered Mt. Sinai Hospital for treatment of a heart ailment after his arrival from Israel last week.

Arabs, Asians delay U.N. action on terror

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — The conflict in the General Assembly over terrorism gathered intensity yesterday. The U.S. was pressing for concrete measures while a bloc of African, Asian and Arab countries prepared delaying action.

The U.S. has proposed for the Assembly to convene a world conference next year to adopt a treaty obligating signing countries to severely punish or extradite international terrorists.

Diplomats have predicted the assembly would stop short of such specific action, but that it might censure terrorists and keep the issue alive for next year's Assembly.

Mr. Bennett argued that the draft treaty proposed by the U.S. would not affect revolutionary struggles or other just causes. He said it would be directed only against terrorist acts that hurt innocent victims abroad or countries not originally involved in disputes prompting violence.

Hijackers may spend life in Cuba jail

NEW YORK. — Premier Fidel Castro told the pilot of the Southern Airways DC-9 jet hijacked to Cuba that the three black gunmen who seized the plane would spend the rest of their lives in prison in Cuba.

A spokesman of the Federal Aviation Administration said the pilot of the plane, Billy Bob Haas, related his conversation with Dr. Castro at a debriefing session in Miami.

The spokesman said the Administration was trying to establish how the hijackers slipped past the metal detection equipment at Birmingham, Alabama, where the 29-hour hijacking drama began late on Friday night.

In Washington the State Department said it was pressing for the return of the three hijackers, and had thanked Cuba for its handling of the crippled plane and its passengers.

State Department spokesman John King said a 1964 U.S.-Cuban extradition treaty might be invoked in the case because the hijackers had either been convicted or were wanted on criminal charges. The treaty covers such crimes as murder and robbery. Two of the hijackers, Henry Jackson, 25 and Lewis Moore, 27, are wanted on rape charges and the third man, Melvin Cole, had escaped from jail.

The State Department's public thanks to Cuba was unusual. It has failed so far to persuade Cuba to return four hijackers of an Eastern Airlines plane which landed in Havana on October 29. (AP, UPI)

More cholera in U.K., Australia

LONDON. — A second case of cholera has been discovered among passengers who have flown to London from Australia via Bahrain.

A 23-year-old woman has been admitted to hospital in London with the disease. She was a passenger on a September 3 flight from Sydney with a stop in Bahrain.

The first cholera case in Britain was a 52-year-old Australian woman now in hospital in Gateshead.

Her condition is improving, officials said yesterday.

A report from Sydney said that three more cases of cholera were confirmed yesterday, but 11 persons detained for investigation in Sydney and Melbourne hospitals were pronounced clear of the disease and released, health authorities said.

The three new cases — two in Victoria State and one in Canberra — bring the total of confirmed cases throughout Australia to 40. The disease is believed to have been spread by persons who passed through Bahrain. (Reuter, UPI)

Unesco call to Israel on monuments

PARIS (AP). — The Unesco general conference urged Israel on Monday to refrain from altering monuments in the city of Jerusalem and other territories held since the Six Day War.

The resolution, which was submitted by 27 countries, mostly Arab, called on Israel "to take the necessary measures for the scrupulous preservation of all sites, buildings and other cultural properties, especially in the Old City of Jerusalem, and to desist from any alteration of the features of the city, as well as from any archaeological excavations."

A draft resolution carried a condemnation of Israel's attitude, but was amended at the suggestion of France, and the adopted text eventually contained no reference to politics. It invited the Unesco Director-General "to ensure the presence of Unesco in the city of Jerusalem with a view to securing the implementation of the resolution."

Brazil police chief fired for kidnap

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP). — The commander of the traffic police division of this northeastern Brazilian state capital has been dismissed from his functions on charges of kidnaping and beating a local newspaper publisher, police said on Monday.

According to police, militia police colonel Jarbas Botelho was involved in the beating of Venelous Xavier Pereira, publisher of the local daily "O Estado."

Col. Botelho reportedly threatened Pereira after he published a story criticizing the colonel for having arrested the teenage sister of one of the newspaper's reporters "without any reason."

Pereira's kidnaping was carried out in military fashion. Two vehicles of the traffic police division blocked the streets around the newspaper's building, while 12 militia police officers and Col. Botelho arrived on the scene in three cars.

They forced their way into Pereira's office dragged him into one of the cars and took him to a road on the outskirts of the city. There, according to the report, Pereira was beaten and left without clothing.

When he recovered some strength, Pereira walked a few miles before borrowing a pair of trousers and getting a ride home.

Later, his wife contacted Ceara state governor Cesar Cals and Colonel Dagmar Sabino, commander of the state's militia police.

After investigating, Col. Sabino ordered Col. Botelho and his group placed under arrest and dismissed.

Death for eight Ghana plotters

ACCRA (Reuter). — Five soldiers and three civilians accused of plotting to overthrow Ghana's ruling National Redemption Council have been sentenced to death by a firing squad, it was announced yesterday.

The prosecution alleged that the accused planned to overthrow the N.R.C. and restore to power Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, which was overthrown in a military coup last January 13.

Three top Mafia men arrested

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Three top Mafia men, mistakenly thought they "owned" a young detective they had bribed with cash, Cadillac and nightclub visits, have been arrested, it was announced here on Monday.

This is the first time in New York's present big anti-crime crackdown that indictments have been produced against people alleged to be near the top in the Mafia structure. Law agents promise there will be more.

The three underworld figures are alleged to have played key roles at a Mafia headquarters in a seedy Brooklyn junkyard where leaders of all five New York Mafia "families" met for consultations.

The headquarters was being bugged by law agents and the detective, Douglas Leven, 25, was deliberately posing as a corrupt cop.

The three men arrested are Paul Vario, 58, an alleged consigliere (counselor) to the Carmine Trammonti Mafia "family," Clyde Brooks, 33, and Norris Rubin, 44, both described as close associates of Vario.

They face charges of bribery, felony and conspiracy which could put each of them in jail for a total of 129 years if convicted on all counts. The charges fill a 35-page document.

The arrest was also announced of 56-year-old Anthony Colucci, a known gambler, charged with bribing another police officer.

The arrests were announced by district attorney Eugene Gold, whose department has been conducting a massive investigation into New York's organized crime.

The indictments resulted from Mr. Gold's probe, revealed last month when police launched a widespread operation to serve subpoenas notices on underworld leaders, compelling them to appear before a grand jury.

After watching the junkyard for six months, filming the big cars and smartly dressed men who arrived there, and listening to Mafia conferences on an electronic bug planted in a trailer in the yard, Gold's agents sent 1,200 police throughout New York last month serving 677 subpoenas.

After the storm burst, Mafia leaders began manoeuvring to escape the dragnet. One of their ploys was to use the young detective, Leven, who became friendly with the three alleged Mafia men by pretending to cooperate in a stolen car racket.

He was paid about $450 in different sums as he slowly built up confidence with the three. In return, he handed out information under the direction of the district attorney's investigation agents.

Capital sports centre plan raises problems

ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The loudest sound one is likely to hear on the hill just west of Shuafat these days is the roar of an occasional bird. Before the end of this decade, however, tens of thousands of men and prides of lions will be producing on that hill some of the most fearsome sounds ever heard in Jerusalem. The hill is scheduled to be developed within six or seven years at its present site in the Tel Aviv Quarter will be the least of it. It is of more concern to those who live in northern Jerusalem who forward to their Saturday afternoon is the sports stadium that will accommodate 23,000 fans, about four times the capacity of either of the two soccer fields in Jerusalem, of which produces a volume of sound on a given Saturday calculated to shatter the Sabbath rest of all adjacent neighbourhoods. A new zoo and stadium area of about 1,800 dunams sports centre recreation area presently being developed by the Municipality is architect in charge, Pasquali is a Mexican immigrant who designed the Olympic village training fields at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City. The tract which he is drawing up for the plan was expropriated after Six Day War but is several red metres from the closest natural land in Shuafat. It is a rocky desert in which vegetation grows much interest. A mind's eye, however, Broidly sees it cloaked in foliage arranged gardens.

"I'm not making a stadium," he said in a recent interview. "We're building a forest of which the stadium and other facilities will be a part. The 1,800 dunams will be a forest of greenery between Ramat Shuafat on the south, Shuafat on the east and the new development of the sweeping down from the east of Nebi Samwil on the north west.

Model shows proposed 23,000-seat stadium on crest of hill west of Shuafat in northern Jerusalem. To right of stadium are the Sports Palace, pools and other facilities that would be contained in a 500-dunam sports centre. Although not shown in the model, the slopes are to form a forested recreation area. In the foreground are houses of Ramat Eshkol. (Zarka)

Aerial photo shows hill between Ramat Eshkol (foreground) and Shuafat that is intended to serve as site for a sports complex and recreation area.

The sports complex will be administered by a company formed by the Jerusalem Foundation, the Jerusalem Economic Corporation and the sports clubs in the city. The Municipality will conspicuously absent itself from participation. Because of the large Orthodox community in Jerusalem — and the strength of the religious parties on the Municipal Council — the Municipality could not be officially associated with an activity desecrating the Sabbath.

"It will, however, participate in the financing of the sports centre along with the Government, the Jerusalem Foundation — a channel for gifts by foreign philanthropists — and the sports associations. The stadium will cost an estimated 11.4 million of which the bulk has already been promised by a foreign contributor. The cost of the entire sports and recreation area is estimated at 11.20 million.

City Councilman Asher Rogel, who is coordinating the development of the complex — sees it as a centre for family outings. One of the advantages of the new stadium, he said, is that it will eliminate two prime nuisance points in the centre of the city — the YMCA stadium where Betar plays, and the Hapoel Jerusalem stadium on Rachel Imenu.

Would not the new stadium, however, constitute a major nuisance point? Broidly replies by noting that it is 500 metres from the closest house in Shuafat, 750 metres from the closest in Ramat Eshkol and a similar distance from the closest house to be built to the west in the Ramot development. "Anyway, the crowds only scream when there's a goal. I understand that there aren't too many goals."

Police's illegal use of force to be probed

TEL AVIV. — A policeman whose name has not been disclosed is to be tried by a disciplinary court for using force against an Israeli now under arrest in Germany in connection with a jewellery robbery in Frankfurt on October 5.

A few months ago Natan Zehavi, 25, was in a Tel Aviv cafe when some policemen were searching someone there for possession of drugs. When Zehavi protested, he claims, he was attacked and beaten. His lawyer filed a complaint on his behalf with the Tel Aviv chief of police, and there was an investigation.

Yesterday the lawyer, Mr. Uri Slonim, received a letter from the police saying that investigation of the complaint had revealed the use of force against Zehavi had not been justified, and that there would be a disciplinary action.

It is feared that the German police have not completed investigation of the robbery, the jewellery has not been recovered, and it appears they do not have enough evidence to bring Zehavi and two other Israeli suspects to trial. (Hwa)

Comprehensive school opened in Druse village

YERKA. — A comprehensive grammar-vocational school, the first in a minority village to be financed by the Israel Education Fund of the United Jewish Appeal, was officially opened in this Western Galilee Druse village Sunday afternoon.

The school has 18 classrooms. In the first stage it will be attended by 850 pupils, including girls.

The subjects taught will include building, metal work, welding, mechanics and farming and for girls, weaving and home economics. The school will also serve the neighbouring Druse villages of Julis and Abu Sma'an.

The Wiener family of the U.S. contributed over $1.1m. towards building the school. Mr. Earl Wiener attended yesterday's opening, together with the Deputy Communications Minister, Sheikh Jaber Mus'adi.

It was announced that the Fund will build another five schools in Arab villages.

TOY FUND BEGINS ITS 24th DRIVE

By HELEN BOSSI
Jerusalem Post Women's Editor

READERS of The Jerusalem Post are fast friends of our annual Toy Fund. Their warm letters, which have been arriving since August, are pressing reminders to move the 24th drive into high gear. And this we are doing today, 16 days before the first Hanukkah candle is lit, which this year also marks The Post's 40th birthday. We would be very pleased if readers would take the number 40 to heart and reflect it in their contributions. But this is only a suggestion — we are delighted with every gift.

Our first list below of early contributors comes to 11,815.52.

This year, our gift-giving is a little complicated — Hanukkah is early, Idel Pitr has just passed and Christmas is of course where it always is, so we will have to make up for one holiday and keep funds for the other one.

The Jerusalem Post Toy Fund has just been informed that another trust fund has been set up for it. The new one is the Sarah Horowitz Memorial Fund. Mrs. Horowitz died in New York last December and her will stipulated that the remainder of her estate, about $9,000 should be used for a trust fund from which The Toy Fund receives the interest every year. "My sister-in-law," writes Abe Silver, "thought very highly of The Jerusalem Post Hanukkah Toy Fund."

- This is the second trust fund of which the Toy Fund is the beneficiary. The first was set up five years ago by an anonymous donor from Brooklyn and is known as the A.J.S. Trust Fund. Both funds are administered by the Bank Leumi Le-Israel Trust Company.
- One of the Toy Fund's most important gifts for the past few years are the watches for Bar and Bat Mitzvah's for children under Ministry of Welfare jurisdiction, who have no one in the world to worry about this special event in their lives. Miftan, the Ministry of Welfare's Youth Rehabilitation Centres, are also one of our special projects. We have supplied all 21 of them with football outfits, and last year we provided some much needed sports equipment for 10 of them. This year, we will have to present the same equipment to those who did not get it last time and we probably will have to replace football outfits, too.
- Ever since the Six Day War, the Toy Fund has budgeted a sizeable sum for Arab schools under the jurisdiction of the Jerusalem Municipality. Last year they too received all manner of sports equipment.
- Before Hanukkah our gifts go out to children under the Foster Family scheme. This is done countrywide through the municipalities and the Ministry of Welfare. Also going out at the same time are boxes of toys to special institutions caring for all kinds of sick children.
- So we are under great all-out effort to bring special cheer to those most needing it.

Speaker greets U.K. 'Deputies'

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Knesset Speaker Yisrael Yeshayahu warmly welcomed the Executive of the Board of Deputies of British Jews when they visited the House on Monday.

Addressing the delegation led by Board president Alderman Michael Adler, M.P., the Speaker described the Board as "the world's most ancient Jewish parliamentary body."

The Speaker said: "Had a great Jewish community not existed in Britain, it is doubtful whether the Balfour Declaration would ever have been issued." Mr. Yeshayahu praised British Jewry's "unbreakable links of loyalty and devotion to the affairs of the Jewish People and the interests of the State of Israel."

Attorney gets access to tax files

NAZARETH. — In what was said to be an unprecedented move in Israeli law, the Finance Minister has instructed that deferring counsel in a criminal bribe case be allowed access to a number of tax files.

This was revealed on Monday when hearings opened in the case of tax evader, official Salah Musa Khoury, of this city, charged with taking bribes. Defence counsel Eliezer Tolster unsuccessfully sought a postponement on the grounds that he had been given the tax files to study only on Friday.

Khoury is charged with the following offences: Writing off an 11,800 tax debt for Sa'ad Abu Kamud, a building contractor, after the latter gave him a car; giving a tax exemption to Hamid Haddad, a farmer at Wadi Hamam near Tiberias, in exchange for two meals, four lambs and two crates of vegetables; reducing the assessment in another file in exchange for two sacks of onions and eight watermelons, and in yet another in exchange for a free ride from Haifa to Nazareth. Leaders of the Students' Union spent most of Monday afternoon and evening studying the committee's lengthy report. Student leaders indicated they were pleased with certain aspects of the report — such as the recommendations for sizeable reductions and loans for needy students — but were displeased with other features.

Modest crown

scarcely crowning the enterprise is the stadium which will be on the one relatively flat area on the crest of the hill. It will be a modest crown. Broidly sees it as a sunken bowl, the field and about half the being below the ground level of the stadium. It is cheaper to half-bury a stadium, says Broidly, to build a conventional "high-structure with its massive support columns. It also makes for ingress and egress, the main being half-way up the stadium, start from the bottom and get seats. Most important, the stadium's low profile will blend, says Shuafat in the background.

can see the hill from many in the city as well as the road from Tel Aviv. We don't to build something that's going to look like a monument." He said the hope that it would be higher on the outside than 15 metres the equivalent of five to six storeys.

more than a year, a climatological station has been operating on the hill to measure wind velocity direction. The field will also be used for field and track events prevailing winds above a certain velocity would rule out the site for national and international com-

Transport problem

The relatively remote location of the new stadium poses a problem since there is no public transportation in Jerusalem on the Sabbath. There will however, be parking spaces for 5,000 cars.

The stadium will be the first facility to be built on the site, the present target date for completion being 1978. The sports centre around it will also contain three pools, one of them Olympic-sized, fringed by thirty dunams of grass. In addition, there will be fields for basketball, tennis and other sports, and football training grounds for the two teams which will be transferring from their present locations in Jerusalem — Hapoel Jerusalem and Betar Jerusalem.

HOW MANY RUSSIAN JEWS?

SEVERAL publications now appear on the subject of Soviet Jewry. One of the most interesting and reliable is "Rechnot" studies on Jews in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe published (in Hebrew) by the Israeli Executive of the World Jewish Congress. A new double issue has just appeared, covering a wide variety of subjects — historical and topical, political and literary, and incorporating important documentation, reviews, and bibliographies.

Among the topical entries is an analysis by Mordechai Altschuler of the Hebrew University of information concerning Soviet Jewry contained in the results of the 1970 census. The previous Soviet census was made in 1959 so that a decade of change is now reflected. The full results of the 1959 census were eventually published in sixteen volumes and a similar full report for the new census is expected for 1973 — but meanwhile there is enough information for examination.

The news that the total Jewish population had dropped by 127,000, (to 2,151,000) evoked surprise outside the Soviet Union — partly because Soviet sources had anticipated an increase. One problem is that there is no way for independent checks or tests to gauge accuracy and to verify. People coming from the U.S.S.R. do hazard estimates as to the number of Jews in particular regions or cities, but this is somewhat guesswork — such figures are difficult, almost impossible sometimes, to reach in other parts of the world where there are Jewish communities or organizations — but in the U.S.S.R. there is no such way of getting to a figure which might be called reliable. (The danger of trying independent estimates can be seen by comparing the figures for the estimated Jewish population of Moscow in the "Jewish Year Book" published in London and the "American Jewish Year Book" — the former gives 700,000 the latter 285,000.)

Geoffrey Wigoder's JEWISH SCENE

When a census is taken in Russia, information regarding nationality is accepted by word of mouth so that a person could declare his nationality to be other than that recorded in his documents. In other words if he so wished a Jew could declare himself as a "Russian." The political and social climate could therefore influence the results on this subject. As far as Jews are concerned, the effect of the national revival since 1959 was probably counteracted by the frequent anti-Jewish propaganda which, co-incidentally or not, intensified in the pre-census period. But Dr. Altschuler feels that these factors are not sufficient to account for the considerable drop in numbers.

In general the Russian census shows a decline in birthrate and an aging of the population, and these trends were doubtless fully reflected in the Jewish community. It is also significant that in Russia (as elsewhere) the urban population increases at a lower rate than the duce less children than their neighbours). It is also noted the high rate of intermarriage, especially in this Republic with the assumption that the couples — and certainly the children — will often thereafter declare themselves as belonging to the non-Jewish nationality, there begin to appear the main reasons for the drop in numbers.

The situation in the Ukraine is similar and the almost equal drop there can be similarly explained. There was little change in the Jewish population of Kiev but this may be accounted for by the influx of Jews from rural areas to the city over the last decade.

In areas annexed by Russia after World War II, the process of assimilation is much less advanced and figures have dropped less steeply — indeed Moldavia is the only European area of the U.S.S.R. where an actual increase is recorded. The strong Jewish national tradition and the lower incidence of mixed marriages would be the key factors in these areas. The slight drop in the Baltic states may be explained by the fact that the small emigration from Russia during the 1950s came mostly from there.

The eight Asian Republics with Jewish populations showed an increase of 5 per cent in the number of Jews. This can be partly explained by the all-round higher birthrate in the Asian areas as well as by a lower incidence of intermarriage.

Concert by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra. Light Classical Music Series. Subscriptions Concert No. 1. Conductor: Benjamin Zander. Op. 15: Sinfonia; Christiana Walewska, soloist. (Mean Anti-Christus, Tel Aviv, November 11). Turina: Danzas Pastorales, Op. 35; Bolero; Sinfonia; Concerto No. 1 in A minor for Cello and Orchestra; De Falla: El Amor Brujo; Bolero.

TOO MUCH ROMANCE

The first concert of the Light Classical Music Series was almost exclusively devoted to Spanish music. Turina, De Falla and Ravel's Bolero are all inspired by and based on Iberian folklore. This music seems very close to Mr. Frubbeck De Burgo's temperament, and he found himself completely and creatively.

Turina's "Danzas," a pleasant, although not very original work, was given an effective, often colourful reading. In "El Amor Brujo" the conductor improvised with a surprising rhythmic freedom, giving the music a rare flexibility and unusual elegance.

The Bolero too was highly impressive, each repetitive sequence finely and sensitively brought out. In the Saint-Saens concerto Miss Walewska tried to... as meaningful as possible and in some of the phrases she impressed, but her tiny tones stripped the work of all contrasts. The opening whirlwind theme and the second lyrical theme, in fact the whole work, were dynamically all alike. The result was boredom and monotony. Miss Walewska lacks the capacities necessary to a concert soloist.

Too much romance

Piano Recital—Annaliese Schier-Tiessen (Wise Auditorium, Hebrew University—November 13). Beethoven: Piano Concerto, opus 15; Klavierkonzert, opus 15; Symphonische Studien, opus 15; Clara Wieck: Romance from opus 8.

A WHOLESOME programme of romantic music, and by one composer at that, can easily become too much of a good thing. Though only part of the first two works were played, they consist of fairly short, descriptive pieces from the same period of creation (1837-38). Even the Symphonische Studien were performed with too long interruptions between the variations.

But the pianist avoided the pitfall of over-romanticizing and concentrated on presenting the music in a rather objective manner which made things easier for the audience. The softer moods were appropriate, but one wished for some more explosive playing where warranted by the music. Especially in the Symphonische Studien, there are plenty of opportunities to let fly and show some fireworks, and Miss Schier-Tiessen missed them all. It was a sober recital without romance and emotional involvement.

Singer Shmuel Kraus let off with fine

Composer and singer Shmuel Kraus was let off Sunday with IL2,500 in fines and a suspended sentence for a series of offences.

Two defence psychiatrists testified that a jail term would undermine the process of his rehabilitation. The prosecution agreed to suspended sentences.

Kraus pleaded guilty to charges of assaulting a policeman and a taxi driver — for which he was fined IL2,000 and given a six-month suspended sentence for three years. He also pleaded guilty to having been in illegal possession of foreign currency, hashish and a rifle when he was picked up with a girl friend at an abandoned house in Nebi Samwil, near Jerusalem, in January 1971.

BRIDGE
By George Levinew

West's 2♠ bid forced with 3♥. I had to bid 3♠. Had I bid 4♠, a possibility, what troubles that might have precipitated for us. But I had the barest minimum — so I bid at the lowest possible level. After my partner bid again, Lomeanu, West decided rightly that we must have a game so he made a good sacrifice in clubs. He expected to win a top board. Theoretically he was entitled to a top. But his result of minus 300 points gave him only 14 match points out of a possible 50 on his deal, while North-South scored 36. Two pairs who bought the contract in spades were too high and were set. The other two pairs made 4♠ and 5♠. 4♠ should be made by careful play. It seems to me that precision bidding is a natural for the distribution on this deal. At 18 of the 28 tables the final contract by North-South was either lower than 4♠ or overboard in diamonds.

TOURNAMENTS are now being arranged in the United States offering prizes of as much as $20,000 to the winners. Do players in such tournaments thereby become professionals?

Should bridge players be classified as professional or non-professional as in tennis? Bridge is still largely a non-professional game for the many thousands of bridge players. It is at the top level that professionalism is accentuated. In the United States, for example, four teams of six, each with its non-playing captain, 28 persons in all, recently competed to represent North America in the 1973 World Bridge Championship. Of these 28 persons, nine, or approximately 1/3, can be classified as professionals who make their living teaching bridge, writing about bridge, managing bridge activities, or otherwise being paid to play. If we include in our account the additional six players on the World Champion Four Aces Team, then almost 50% of the top United States players are professionals. Is this development of professionalism a boon to bridge?

Research shows heavy smokers risk lung cancer

CHICAGO (UPI). — A research project found some types of lung cancer to be four times as likely among persons who smoke more than a pack of cigarettes a day, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported this week.

An article in the Association's Journal disclosed findings of the Philadelphia Pulmonary Research Project, which followed medical histories of 6,027 volunteers for 10 years.

Of the volunteers, 121 developed lung cancer and all of those were smokers, the report said.

"Bronchial cancer was found to be four times as likely if the patient smoked over 20 cigarettes a day," the article said. "Among the 2,590 men who regularly smoked cigarettes, the risk of lung cancer increased with increasing daily cigarette consumption."

ACTIVIST JUDY TELLS HOW SHE GOT GAVRIEL OUT

Women's Lib moves forward in Brussels

By Sarah Honig
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — How could I possibly have been scared when in the Soviet in Jews were telling me, often in Hebrew, that they have killed "Judy Silver Shapiro reformed" a question when I asked last Wednesday if she had not been afraid as a Jewish activist going to the U.S.S.R. and finally going to a Soviet Jew, with whom, she knew, she might not be able to live for many long years. The bride arrived here 10 days ago.

about all my wedding guests? And my parents-in-law? We've got to rescue them all. We can't sit tight contentedly.

The one "message Russian Jews kept giving me was 'make a noise—we want to get out.' This was so everywhere I went during all my visits in the U.S.S.R.," Judy declared. The first visit was in April, 1971, when Judy came to Moscow with her younger brother Barry, and it was then that she met Gavriel. She had visited him twice since and kept in touch through weekly phone calls before the June, 1972, wedding. In all they saw each other for seven and a half weeks before marriage — "a long but abnormal courtship," as Judy puts it.

Gavriel and Judith Shapiro after their wedding in Moscow on June 6, 1972. The bride's dress came from Israel.

Cincinnati-born Judy remained quiet and could not be deterred from marrying Moscow-born Gavriel in a private religious ceremony in the Soviet capital. The bride even had to smuggle the wedding canopy, the bride's veil and even a skullcap for into the U.S.S.R. Every step of the way was fraught with danger.

WHAT WORKED

"If I believed in silent diplomacy to be the best policy, I would have kept my mouth shut and gone home and waited quietly. That is not what I did and that is not what worked in my case," she says while taking a small folder of wedding pictures from her purse and pointing out the best man and guests. "They are all counting on us to 'make a noise,'" she emphasizes. "I met young wives with their husbands sentenced to long periods of imprisonment for wanting to emigrate to Israel. They told me that their spirits are kept up by one thing — the conviction that the outside world cares. We can't let them down."

The struggle for Gavriel's liberation was led by Judith with the participation of thousands — Jewish volunteers, non-Jews, State Department officials and Congressmen. Judy is especially impressed with Washington Senator Henry ("Scoop") Jackson's devotion to the cause. "He doesn't have a great Jewish constituency in his state. He is very important in the struggle because he is just such a very good man," she says. His amendment to deny the U.S.S.R. favored-nation treatment "is the first concrete action of the sort ever taken." Judy goes on to tell of an extensive grassroots movement on behalf of Russian Jews all around the U.S. "It's not limited to Jews only. I know of 20 university professors in Minnesota who are very active, for example, and all are non-Jewish."

HAPPY ENDING

It like in a fairy tale this of love, hardship and struggle came to a happy ending. Or would seem. Gavriel was unconditionally issued an exit permit by Soviet authorities, who even paid the ransom fee for this young engineer. "It was a gift from the U.S. government. I know did a lot but I can't disclose details," a beaming Judy says. "It is also happy. He's on a cloud. He can't believe he's yet. He says he was born the day he came here," Judy says.

happy it indeed is. But an "By no means," asserts Judy. "I tell me that now that I've my husband freed I can settle to a quiet, normal life. But can I? What about the best at our wedding, Mark Nash. He received the same sentence as Gavriel, but had no American wife to get him out. And what that one of their programmes in particular should be adopted by the Israeli public and on a large scale. "We are each adopting a particular Jewish family in Russia. This makes the issue a flesh and blood one. We write to them and talk to them by phone. Many are in dire need, having been dismissed from work years ago for applying to go to Israel and they have children to support. We help our families materially and financially. We help keep their spirits up."

"But such a programme would be so much more meaningful from Israel since this is where the families would finally come to, and it would be so wonderful to have people they know here helping them in those first days of adjustment. Just mail from Israel, telling them how it is here, dealing even with such 'wax' topics as the weather, would mean so much," Judy says. She knows that many addresses of such families can be obtained from the Students Struggle for Soviet Jewry office at 200 West 72 St. in New York City.

Israel, she maintains, ought to be the vanguard of the struggle. "There ought to be mass demonstrations. I know that many people demonstrated in Chicago on the anniversary of the murder of Jewish writers by Stalin. I heard of nothing similar here. The anniversary of those horrid Leningrad trials will be coming up in December and protest rallies should already be prepared."

"Judy is afraid of just one thing. "Now that the U.S. elections are over and the wooing of the Jewish vote is over as well, the American politicians will lift pressure off the Soviets. In this time of détente it is of utmost importance that it not be relaxed. The pressure of the U.S. is one of the best weapons we have," she is convinced.

Her own priorities are now finding a flat in Jerusalem, where she and Gavriel expect to settle. (Judy is a social worker and would like to work with new immigrants.) Then she wants to take Gavriel for

Vegetable salads

By Molly Lyons Bar-David

THERE are lots of salads in Israel and with the variety of vegetables and fruits now available you can make your own. Here are just a few that may inspire you to try your own hand.

Emir's Pearls
4 oranges, peeled and thinly sliced, 4 sweet onions thinly sliced, black olives, olive oil, lemon juice.
On top of each orange slice, put a slice of sweet onion. Garnish with black olives and drizzle with olive oil and lemon juice. Serves 5 or 6.

Kibbutz Salads
Making salads in a kibbutz has become a ritual. On the tables are bowls of tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, onions, garlic, s'chug relish, leban or yoghurt, sour cream, salt, pepper, oil, parsley, coriander, plus other vegetables so plentiful that the surplus has to be tackled in the dining room. Motke — the kibbutznik, will dice his salad finely and dress it in oil. Hannah will slice her combination and use sour cream dressing. The greatest gourmet everywhere mix their salads at table; at the kibbutz everyone does his own to save the kitchen staff the work. And every kibbutznik takes pride in his own combination. So there's a great tradition, but no recipe.

Indian Lakshmi Salad
1 clove garlic, 1 teaspoon curry powder, French dressing or mayonnaise, 4 cups cooked rice, 1/2 cup salted peanuts or pistachio nuts, 3 chopped green onions, 2 chopped green peppers, 1 chopped red pimento, 4 tbsps. Chutney sauce.
Rub the mixing bowl with garlic. Add the curry powder to the French dressing or mayonnaise. Mix all the ingredients and add. Garnish with lettuce.

French dressing: 6 tbsps. olive or other oil, 3 tbsps. wine vinegar or citrus vinegar or lemon juice, 1 tsp. sugar, 1/2 tsp. mustard, 1 crushed clove garlic, 1/2 tsp. salt, pinch of paprika, grain of cayenne, pinch of pepper. Put all the ingredients into a bottle. Shake well.

Avocado-Citrus Salad
Avocado wedges, either pommelo or grapefruit segments, orange segments, tomato wedges, ball of cottage cheese, grating of yellow cheese, lettuce. Use the above French dressing.

Remove the membranes from the pommelo or grapefruit and orange segments and arrange in a circle with wedges of avocado filled with wedges of tomato. Place the cottage cheese, topped with the grated yellow cheese, in the centre of the circle. Pour French dressing (use lemon juice instead of vinegar in the dressing this time) over the fruit and vegetables and garnish with lettuce.

Carrot-Pineapple Salad
1/2 kilo fresh carrots, juice of 1/2 lemon, 1 tin of pineapple with the juice, juice of 1 orange, dash of ginger, salt to taste.
Peel the carrots and grate coarsely. Cover with the juice of the lemon, pineapple and orange. Dice up the pineapple and mix well. If you wish, add a dash of ginger and the salt. Refrigerate for several hours so that the carrots absorb the juices. It improves with keeping — at least up to three days. Serve on lettuce leaves or if you wish garnish with sprigs of mint.

Beet Salad
3 cups diced cooked beets, 3 tbsps. grated onion, 3 tbsps. ready-made horseradish, 2 teaspoons honey or sugar, dash of salt, 1/2 cup French dressing and if you wish 1 tbsp. of Chutney sauce, lettuce, sliced red radishes for decoration, mayonnaise or salad dressing.
Mix the diced beets with the onion, horseradish, honey or sugar, French dressing, Chutney sauce. Pack into 5 cups, half-full, and chill. Turn over on crisp lettuce and surround with sliced red radishes (or if you wish — sectors of beetroots). Top with mayonnaise or serve with a salad dressing.

American Salad
1 cup cooked American celery, 1 cup cooked peas, 1 grated carrot or instead 1 grated turnip, 2 diced apples, 1 teaspoon chopped green onion, 1/2 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup shredded yellow cheese, salt and pepper and lettuce.
Toss together everything and serve on crisp lettuce.

Quick Salad
4 tomatoes cut into wedges, 1 large cucumber thinly sliced, 1 red pimento sliced, 4 hard-boiled sliced eggs, 2 sliced green onions, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, 1/2 cup mayonnaise or French dressing, salt and pepper, lettuce, 6 sliced of pickled beef or sausage.
Fry the sausage or the pickled beef in oil, combine the vegetables or if you wish arrange them nicely on each plate and pour over the French dressing or put mayonnaise in the centre. Siver up the fried pickled beef or sausage and sprinkle on top of the salad.

Shortage of manpower hampers production

By SRAYA SHAPIRO
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The greatest obstacle to smooth production in factories in this country is lack of manpower. This impression is gained by press releases in the "Nofy" Blue-and-white campaign, sponsoring the "made in Israel" products. Plants visited were in the neighbourhood of Acre, the Israel-American Mills in Hadera, the Beisan Textiles, Strauss Ice Cream Factory, in Acre, and the Franz Levi per plant in Haifa.

It was discovered that a pros-ess enterprise such as the Beisan Textiles and weaving plant may have lost because there is no way to add an additional 80 to 100 un-der workers for round-the-clock of the equipment.

According to the Beisan Textiles agreement, the construction of a red housing units in town would solved all its problems — but Ministry of Housing allegedly as to put Beisan on its pri- list. "If we do not get the workers to fill the gap, we have to close the factory and workers will go idle," Mr. Nutt, the managing director, said. At-pts to bring workers from town did not succeed.

It is a problem town, not only use it is still shelled occasion- from across the border. The enemy is boredom: its only ation spot is the cinema.

One cannot predict where the threat to industry may come from. The Hadera Paper Mills invested $1.8m. in a plant to process corn stalks into pulp. That was when the Hula drainage was nearing completion and the agricultural experts predicted the whole area would produce corn. In fact, corn stalks and other hay-like materials hardly sufficed to feed the Hadera plant for three months a year. The import of wood pulp continues to this day, supplemented by used paper and cardboard collected locally. Some 12 to 15,000 tons annually are collected in the Hadera Paper Mills alone, but the potential of used paper collection is estimated at 60,000 tons.

taught him to stock more raw materials than "normal." That means an investment of money and ac-ceptable as valid by tax authorities," Mr. Michael Strauss of Strauss Ice Cream, said.

The Government's fiscal policy is also a variable, full of surprises.

"Another list of goods is taken off the protected produce list, and this may ruin many of the local man-ufacturers," Mr. Immanuel Fortuna, of "Tasbin" chemical industries, warned.

But there was a recurring com-plaint about shrinking revenues. At the Paper Mills, a graph showed that the plant could not "ab-sorb" any more expenses which went into calculation of prices in the past two years. Price Control often worked against the consumer, be-cause it dealt in bulk with a series of products of various kinds, which the industrialist would have been able to price differently had he been allowed.

And the Mills now plan a new $1.65m. cardboard factory which in the early 1980s will depend mainly on used paper as its raw material. Obstruction to industry may arise from totally legitimate public inter-est as in the case of the "Tira Quarries" on the Carmel. For safety reasons, the quarries are required to expand their area. But the Nature Reserves Authority says expansion would damage the unique Carmel floral paradise. The special kind of stone from Tira is exported to the tune of $760,000 per year. "If the quarry is not expanded, it will have to close," Mr. Kellner said.

Then there are the ecological con-siderations. The Hadera Mills, which are partly responsible for the stench of the Hadera river, have undertaken to find a solution. In a small labora-tory the mills have established on their own account, chemists try with an activated sludge method with mi-crobes from the Netanya sewage system to neutralize the offending refuse which pours into the river.

How far can a private initiative safely go? — There are limits, Mr. Werner Ritter, the managing direc-tor of Franz Levi Ltd. of Haifa admits. The late Franz Levi began in a small way almost forty years ago producing conveyor belts in his Hadera Hacarmel workshop. Today, the firm which bears his name spe-cializes in rubber boots, indatable airmen's suits and firemen's hoses.

"We felt we could not bear the burden as a family business only and went into equal partnership with Cial Investments in 1969," Mr. Ritter said. However, the family made sure it had a 51 per cent vote in management.

Mr. Kellner was ready to give a recipe for success in industry. He believes it is based on three prin-ciples: invest all the money you need out of your own pocket and have as little as possible to do with the Government; pay workers fair wages and compensate them for increased output — they know your produc-tion figures anyhow and feel they have done their bit to foster them; know your trade.

Supervised credit, increasingly being applied to finance Israel's agriculture, is a more advanced form of banking than the conven-tional bank credits system used here for industrial borrowers, ac-cording to the chairman of Bank Leumi, Dr. E. Lehmann.

While the bank credits are based primarily on collaterals, the supervised credits rely on the borrower's regular reports and consultations with the bank, and on the bank's right to veto investments or major expenditure which it considers not prudent.

Dr. Lehmann told a semi-nary held recently to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Bank Ya'ad, a subsidiary of Bank Leumi, which took over the Central Bank of Co-operative Institutions, in 1962.

Supervised credits were first de-veloped in the U.S. and were pion-ered here by the Central Bank, headed by Harry Viteles. Dr. Lehmann told the meeting. He envisaged the gradual introduction of supervised credit also for the industrial sec-tor in this country.

Professor Ezra Sadan pointed out that in the U.S. supervised credits were developed in order to meet the special needs of family farms which are often unable to provide adequate collaterals, while in Is-rael this system has been mainly adopted for the big kibbutzim farms, in order to replace borrow-ing from various sources and to consolidate the kibbutzim finances.

He expected kibbutzim to mature financially to a point when they would issue debentures to the pub-lic, perhaps even shares of their industrial ventures, in particular the regional produce processing plants. Credits for family farms should be expanded, he said, and perhaps even special bank branches should be set up in moshavim, to ensure financial guidance for mem-bers.

HAIFA'S PALAFEL vendors have raised their prices by 25 per cent. A full portion now costs 11L, instead of 80 agorot. Soldiers are granted a 20-agora reduction.

A public experiment of the prototype model of a linear motor train, which the Japanese National Railways Corporation of Japan is studying for a high speed train. The model is a two seater, with a weight of 3,500 kilograms. The model and experimental rail are designed to give the vehicle a maximum speed of 60 kilometres per hour with the maximum floating height of 100 millimetres above the rail. If the study proves successful, the National Railway hopes to be able to develop a 500 kph train linking Tokyo and other main cities throughout Japan. (AP)

ROSE GROWING IS A TRICKY BUSINESS

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

REHOVOT. — Raising flowers, especially roses, for export is one of Israel's newest science-based in-dustries. But it's a tricky business: you can make an excellent living at it, but you can also go bankrupt.

So says Professor Abraham Halevy, director of the Department of Ornamental Horticulture at the He-brew University's Faculty of Agri-culture here.

"Some growers make an excel-lent living from two dunams of greenhouses because they mobilize the entire family. Not only the wife, but the children too have to pitch in and help during certain periods, and the entire family must then work late into the night. But if you depend on hired labour, or if you decide to work a regulation eight-hour day, every day, and refuse to adapt your hours to the needs of the flowers, you will soon be out of business."

The department built its first greenhouse some nine years ago, and this added impetus to the entire industry. Today there are about 1,000 families in Israel making the major part of their livelihood out of roses, grown under glass or plas-tic.

It costs about 1L80,000 to build and equip a one-dunam (1,000 sq.m.) greenhouse: two such greenhouses provide a comfortable living for a family team. This very high invest-ment covers the cost of one green-house, the plants (about 6,000 roses at 1L.50 each) and the heating, irrigation and electrical systems. It does not include the cost of the land on which the greenhouse stands.

"Lately, several families have been branching out into raising orchids under glass," says Prof. Halevy. "This is a much more expensive undertaking. The plants themselves can cost anywhere from 1L40 to 1L200 apiece and some 20,000 plants are needed for one dunam."

Although most of the flower growers raise roses and a few, orchids, some families raise carnations, chrysanthemums and gerberas, all under plastic.

One of the many problems of raising flowers is that the foreign market is confined to the cold winter months. Fortunately Israelis themselves are avid flower buyers, and they snap up flowers during the summer months as well as during the winter.

A much more important problem is the timing of the crop. A shipment of roses which arrives in the European capitals one day after Christmas is worthless: to be of any use, it must arrive two to three days before Christmas. And the same goes for all other winter holidays.

And still another problem. "Flowers are an ornament, and ornaments must be perfect, or as near perfect as possible. If the flower arrives with any defect no matter how slight, it is picked over and left for last — and by then it has generally wilted and is there-fore discarded. So not only must the flowers leave here perfect but they must arrive in perfect condi-tion."

This calls for exact timing of flights out of the country, since flowers are a highly perishable item. "And what if the rose doesn't open? This is another problem which must be constantly tackled in the search for new methods."

At present, Prof. Halevy says, his department is experimenting in several directions in order to make this science-based industry flourish. One is increasing the longevity itself of flowers; another is ensuring they open on time and to full perfection; a third is in-creasing their beauty, so that they can compete even better than they do now in markets abroad.

Dow Jones pushes 1,000 mark

NEW YORK (AP). — The Dow Jones Industrial Average pushed past the 1,000 mark yesterday for the seventh time. As on previous occasions, it began to move back after reaching the long-awaited level. After going to 1,000.23, it fell back to 1,000.8.

While the Dow has gone over the mark, it has never closed at more than 1,000.

The historic break-through came after a day of heavy trading. Since the Dow had always slipped back previously after reaching the 1,000 level, many investors had placed orders to sell at or near that level. Thus, as the thousand was neared, the heavy selling developed.

In the last half hour, trading was so heavy that reporting on the tape had to be curtailed to keep up with the pace of trading. This meant that the number of shares involved in each trade was not noted, just the price of the stock.

BEN-AHARON DEFENDS EGGED

Territory not barrier to peace

By DAVID KRIVINE, Post Economic Correspondent

It is not differences over territory that hold up peace with Arab Governments, according to Mr. Yitzhak Ben-Aharon, Secretary-General of the non-racialist Alignment.

Yitzhak Ben-Aharon at yesterday's meeting with the staff of The Jerusalem Post.

Mr. Ben-Aharon said that the territorial question can be solved without difficulty, he said in a question-and-answer session with staff members of The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Concerning Arab labour, the Histadrut chief was clear on two points. "First, Arabs who work in Israel ought to be full Trade Union members."

the bus service. If the Government decides that some of it should be carried by the public at large, so that not all the expense falls on the travelling passengers, it is not Egged's responsibility.

Egged did give himself a wage increase without Histadrut authority. The Histadrut informed the Government and the Government omitted this increase when calculating the rise in costs for fixing the new fare structure.

Meanwhile he firmly opposes suggestions to nationalize the bus cooperatives, and commented, and laughed: "All those circles that are against nationalization in principle favour nationalizing the Histadrut's property."

Mr. Ben-Aharon rounded his remarks off with a warning to "We shall still be living close together with these people."

WASHINGTON TALKS

THE talks that took place yesterday between U.S. Secretary of State Rogers and Defense Minister Dayan could, on all counts, be significant.

Unfortunately it is not enough that Mr. Rogers should agree with Mr. Dayan that it would be a good thing to reopen the Suez Canal with the aid of a partial Israeli withdrawal.

For two years or so, up to last June, while there was a major and menacing Soviet military presence in Egypt, we were accustomed to many warnings and pleas to go easy with Egypt.

According to U.S. sources, we are now being told that we should go easy with Egypt, in the hope of a settlement, and if there were any such hope in sight it would be excellent advice. With it comes the recommendation that the Soviet withdrawal should not influence our way of thinking too much.

It is doubtful whether agreements can be reached more easily by disregarding important elements in the situation. Sinai and the possession of Sharm el-Sheikh in particular give Israel a degree of security which no responsible government would yield for anything but another form of equally good security.

It is by no means certain that there are now prospects for successful negotiations with Egypt, because Sadat's internal position has been undermined. Nor does the departure of the Russians mean that he is ready to receive American advisers instead.

COLONELS' RULE

Greek-Israeli differences are vast

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, I have just read David Krivine's shockingly biased article on Greek-Israeli similarities.

The author seems to brush aside the absolute lack of human principles in the Junta, in view of the economic stability it has created. He even goes so far as to say that this stability is due to the fact that "Greece's leaders govern well."

Mr. Krivine closes his article with the question, "What will be Israel-Greek relations in the future?" In view of growing reports of anti-Semitism in the hierarchy of the Greek Orthodox church, a stronghold in present day Greece life, as well as the infamous freedom-fighting fascists in command, I hope that relations will be non-existent.

In short, the only pertinent similarity I find is that both Greeks and Israelis are generally good, honest, free-thinking human beings.

David Krivine comments: I did not pronounce on the merits or demerits of the Colonels' regime, because I know nothing about it.

The political point I made is that the tendency to demagoguery in democratic countries today is responsible for a growing pressure towards autocracy.

LANSKY'S PROBLEMS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, I find it astonishing that David Landau and other members of the Israeli press are indignant about the so-called discriminatory treatment meted out to an elderly sifting Jew by the name of Meyer Lansky.

Perhaps it is impossible for Israelis to imagine the magnitude of the crimes with which Lansky has been associated. Violence and corruption has been perpetrated by the Mafia in almost every aspect of American life.

SUPPORT FOR LYOVA ELIAV

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, May I be permitted — I believe also on behalf of many others as well — to join Mr. Baran, Executive Chairman of the Coalition and Alignment Knesset Faction, in his support for Lyova Eliaiv in his bid for a Cabinet seat (November 5).

As to your Political Reporter's information about the sharp criticism by many party leaders of Mr. Eliaiv's urging "Israel's unilateral evacuation of the West Bank without a firm peace" — this criticism is either a distortion of Mr. Eliaiv's idea expressed in his book "Eretz Hatzvi" or proof that the critics have not read the book.

Bad behaviour at the bridge table

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, I read your bridge column of October 23 with interest, as the question of behaviour and manners at local tournaments has been brought up many times at meetings of the Israel Bridge Federation Executive as well as at individual branch assemblies.

I feel that in order to improve the tournaments in this regard one must start with the executives of the branches setting up a series of penalties for various breaches of good manners in their tournaments, and give their tournament directors instructions and complete authorization to enforce them.

MISPLACED PITY

Getting through on the phone

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, Recently Communications Minister Shimon Peres was quoted in The Jerusalem Post as saying that "98 per cent of (all phone) calls go through without trouble."

Mr. Lansky's problem is not religious persecution. The 111 rights of the accused are probably better protected in the American judicial system than anywhere else in the world.

LEGAL BRUTALITY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, Congratulations to David Landau on exposing the Interior Minister's sanctimonious hypocrisy in the Meyer Lansky case.

BRONX AND JERUSALEM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, All I can say to the letter written about Rabbi Kahane by George Tordash (November 6) is that Jerusalem is certainly not the Bronx.

SUPPORT FOR LYOVA ELIAV

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, I feel no pity for Mr. Lansky. If he is suffering some discomfort in his old age, it is much less than that caused many other young and old people by him and his henchmen.

LEGAL BRUTALITY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, I find it astonishing that David Landau and other members of the Israeli press are indignant about the so-called discriminatory treatment meted out to an elderly sifting Jew by the name of Meyer Lansky.

ISRAEL PRESS

Gahal, elections and Vered

Ha'aretz (non-party), opposing Gahal's demand to advance the date of the elections, writes: "If Gahal wants to prove that its opposition strength is not broken, it had better adopt more popular measures. It could, for instance, display a more vigorous attitude in the Knesset financial committee with regard to the 'Vered' affair."

She'arim (Poalei Agudat Yisrael), viewing the secrecy surrounding the 'Vered' affair as one of the most demoralizing aspects of the case, comments: "It has been proved beyond any doubt that those in charge of public investment are incapable of efficient supervision and of spotting the dangers of the collapse of Government enterprises. Setting up a special supervisory body with wide powers could solve this problem."
